As you begin the process of touring senior care communities for your loved one, consider the following.

- Do you smell urine or strong antiseptic cleaners to possibly cover up odors?
- Are staff members busy helping and talking with residents?
- Are patients involved in activities or just sitting around bored with nothing to do?
- What tone of voice does the staff use with the residents?
- Are they addressed politely by name?
- Are call lights on or blinking because residents need help in their rooms?
- Are staff members responsive to patient or family member needs and requests?

How Can CarePatrol Assist My Family?

- CarePatrol can show you each nursing home's latest Medicare survey prior to or during your tour of the community.
- CarePatrol can personally pick you up at your home and tour you through our personally-recommended care options for you. We help streamline the care transition process by working with your hospital discharge planner or social worker.
- If further care is needed, we can also help you find assisted living or memory care for your loved one after his/her short-term rehabilitation in a nursing home.
